"Lesson Learned: DIG EM!"

The letter below was submitted by Robert from Katy, Texas, who wrote to Garrett to say that he loves his AT Pro metal detector.

Robert wrote:

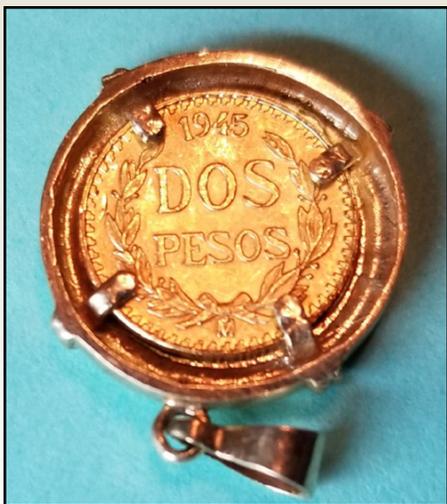

"It's a few years old but it is my favorite detector. Many nice finds and I always have it with me in the car. I didn't get to hunt very much in January, so I spent time watching YouTube videos. I started watching a guy that uses the AT Pro and finds a lot of rings and jewelry.

"He gives the VDI of all targets. I was amazed at what he was finding when digging penny signals and digging all the pull tab signals—even when you are tired of digging pull tabs. I finally got out to a soccer field this month and decided to dig the way the YouTuber was doing.

"It paid off! I dug all the penny signals and found a nice chunky silver bracelet half, and by not giving up on the pull tabs—even after digging 20 or 30—I was pleasantly surprised to see gold in the hole!!

"It is this nice Dos Peso pendant. I am so excited! This is what I have been missing by giving up on pull tabs and pennies. Lesson learned. DIG 'EM! Thanks to the YouTuber and to Garrett for the AT Pro. I always recommend this detector to others."

FOUND FROM WHERE?

Nearly 50 years after a woman lost her boyfriend's class ring in a Maine department store, it turned up buried six inches deep in the floor of a forest in Finland. "I was shocked. And didn't really believe that it was his. I needed to see it," Debra M., the owner of the ring told CNN of the surprise discovery. The man who found it was just as excited.

The ring's journey began in Portland, Maine, in 1973. It belonged to her high school boyfriend, Shawn (whom she later married in 1977, he passed away in 2017 after battling cancer for 6 years), and he gave it to her before he left Morse High School for college. She lost it not long after he left, when she removed it to wash her hands at a department store in Portland. "It wasn't there when I went back and it was only minutes and that was the last I saw of it."

The ring was found in a forest in Finland by Marko S., a 38-year-old sheet-metal worker who spends a few hours a week looking for historic items with his Garret ACE 250 metal detector. Marko posted a photo of the ring to the Morse High School Class of 1973 Facebook page and quickly received a response. The alumni group had no trouble finding the original owner. Debra was glad the ring found its way home. She believes the discovery was a message from her late husband that he's still with her.

COIN SURPRISE!

FEATURED FIND

Alejandro P. and several detecting friends spent many hours one hot summer day last year walking along the Tarapaca gorge in Chile, hoping to find something great. After many false signals, Alejandro hit a good signal with his Garrett ACE 300i. With high hopes, he dug what proved to be a minted coin called the Spanish macuquina, which is approximately 270 years old.

"I confess that I sat down and tears fell from my eyes to live this glorious moment," said Alejandro. "I was waiting a long time to know the history of the coin and the whole process that was done when minted. I finally had a treasure in my hands, thanks to my 300i. I hope to continue advancing in Garrett brand detector technology because I want to go for more!"

Garrett's Code of Detecting Ethics

Charles Garrett always urged his fellow searchers to conduct themselves as responsible treasure hunters and to leave their hunt areas in better condition than they found them. Please follow your local directives during the current health crisis, but when you are able to safely enjoy detecting, here are just a few of his keys to good conduct in the field:

- Never trespass or hunt on private property without permission.
- National and state parks/monuments, etc. are absolutely off-limits.
- Always fill in every hole that you dig.
- Do not leave litter or other discarded junk items lying around.
- Always carry out all rubbish and dug targets with you when you leave a search area.
- Use reasonable caution in digging toward any target, particularly in areas where you are uncertain of the ground conditions.
- Keep informed on and obey all local and national legislation relating to the discovery and reporting of found treasures.
